Figure A. Electrode setup for anode stripping experiment. The working electrode is a gold stud with a ball of solder on the top to keep the length inserted into vial stays the same. The working and reference electrodes are made of silver/silver chloride wires wrapped around a plastic support stud. All electrodes are connected with alligator clips.