
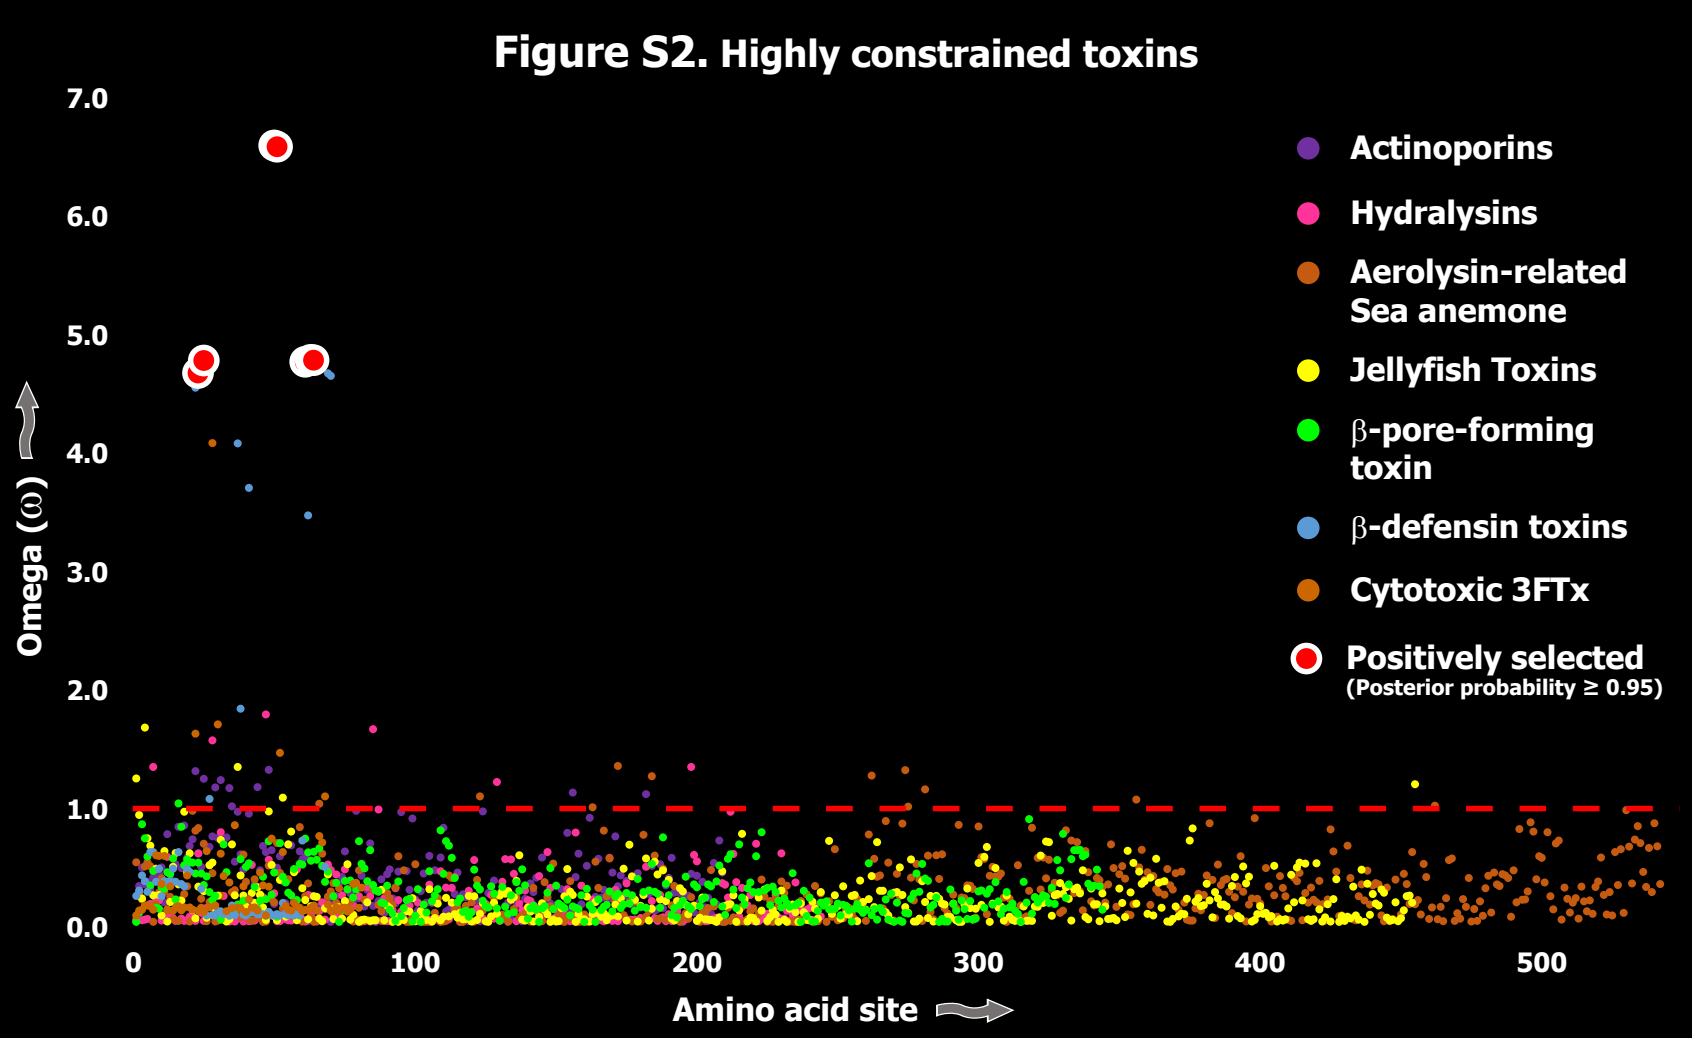

Figure S2: Certain toxins are more constrained than others. A plot of site-specific ω against amino acid positions for various toxin types is presented. Significantly detected positively selected sites (model 8; Bayes Empirical Bayes approach) are presented as large red circles. The red horizontal line represents the line of neutrality: points above and below this line indicate positive and negative selection, respectively.