The image shows a graph comparing the spatial periodicity of amino acids in two species: S. cerevisiae and S. pombe. The x-axis represents spatial periodicity (1/130bp), and the y-axis represents amplitude. Each row in the graph corresponds to a different amino acid, and the lines represent the periodicity distribution with varying colors indicating different conditions or genotypes.