

S1 Fig. Measuring connectivity with degree of centrality and distribution of the nodes in the network. Degree of centrality measures the amount of nodes connected to neighbor node, a node is important if it has many neighbors. X-axis represents the amount of connectivity (links) and y-axis represent the amount of nodes with said connectivity. Overall, the network has a few nodes that are highly connected representing a real network (power law).